NOTES ON REDUPLICATIVE WORDS IN ENGLISH

Introduction

Let us start this study with a few quotations showing the use of reduplicatives in informal English: 'Celia's got a funny way of talking.' 'Do you mean funny ha-ha or funny peculiar?' (SWAN, Practical English usage,² p.208), The result is a ragbag of architectural terms, pseudo-sociological mumbo-jumbo and often frankly useless information (from a review of a book on country houses, Evening Standard, 8 September, 1996, p. 26), The jerry-red bus [the London Routemaster] was affectionately known as the jo-jo (jump on, jump off). (Evening Standard, 8 September, 1996, p. 6).

The first book dealing with reduplication was written by August Friedrich POTT and published in 1862. Pott devoted 304 pages of his Doppelung (Reduplikation, Gemmination) als eines der wichtigsten Bildungsmittel der Sprache to reduplication in many languages, mostly non-Indo-European. He collected thousands of reduplicatives referring to sounds, colours, changes in property and also fulfilling grammatical functions, eg the weak preterite in Gothic and the Latin mihi — tibi — sibi, nobis — vobis. His English examples, scattered under various thematic headings, include crinkum-crankum, dilly-dally, ding-dong, firry-farry, flim-flam, gee-gaw, griff-graff, habnab, hairum-scairum, helter-skelter, hiddy-giddy, hiltie-skiltie, hodge podge, hoity-toity, hubbub, hubble-bubble, hugger-mugger, hum drum, hurdy-gurdy, hurly-burly, hussle-bussle, jingle-jangle, knick-knack, riff-raff, shag bag, shim sham, slip slop, tag-rag, ting-tang, titter-totter, tow mow, tuzzy-muzzy, twittle-twattle, widdle-waddle. Although Pott's English reduplicatives are not very numerous, they reveal features known from later studies based on higher numbers of cases, ie the high proportion of initial h- in rhymes (hurly-burly) and the preponderance of the i — a ablaut in alliterative pairs (griff-graff). Pott even draws on Dobrovský and gives a few Czech words: kukačka, žežulka, hať mať, plesk třesk, tintidlo. One of his examples from Austrian German, dechtl mechtl, is also known as a Czech borrowing.

The importance of Pott's study for modern research can be seen perhaps less in the relatively small number of English words, all of which appeared later in Wheatley 1866, but more in the large number of examples from non-European languages. It is in these languages that reduplication can be regarded as 'eines der wichtigsten Bildungsmittel der Sprache'. This is supported by a number of words taken over from these languages into European languages (agar-agar, beriberi, tsetse) and into Australian, New Zealand and other varieties of English in close contact with the non-European languages (kaikai, lomo-lomi, miamia).

The first, and the last dictionary of reduplicatives was compiled by Henry B. WHEATLEY and published in 1866. Wheatley claims that his dictionary contains more than six hundred words but his numbers are based on eg dingle-dangle being counted once as an adjective, then again as a verb, etc. If cases like that are counted only once, the number of reduplications in Wheatley is 557, out of which 305 words are rhymes (hocus-pocus) and 252 words are ablauts (dingle-dangle). Wheatley did not include pure reduplications, called echo-formations or echoes in the present paper, like din-din although he says that 'we have only to listen to the talk of nurses how natural is their construction' (1866.4). Both in the rhymes and in the ablauts we again meet with patterns described in more recent studies: more than one third of the rhyming compounds has h- in the first component and nearly all the ablaut formations have [i] in the first component. While 29 out of 35 Pott's English words (ie 83 percent) appear in the SOD corpus here, Wheatley's list contains a number of rare words or nonce words: only about 38 per cent of his reduplicatives are recorded in the Shorter Oxford Dictionary.

After Pott and Wheatly reduplication in English was treated in grammars (JESPERSEN 1942, QUIRK et al. 1985), in books on word formation (KOZIOL 1937, MARCHAND 1969, HANSEN et al. 1982, PEPRNÍK 1992), and in a number of studies published in periodicals (KIRCHNER 1956 and 1959, HANSEN 1964). Nils THUN published a monograph devoted to reduplicative words in 1963. His list contains more than 1,700 words, arranged under thematic headings, eg sound, motion, high degree, mental instability. About one half of this book is devoted to the meaning of English reduplicatives but he also discusses their form and origin. A study comparing reduplicatives in English, Czech and Russian was published by Renata BLATNÁ and Czech and English reduplicative words were compared in a paper by the present author.

With all the studies, books and chapters devoted to reduplicatives the question arises whether any other study is needed. The aim of the present notes is therefore very modest: (i) to make a list of all the reduplicatives quoted in all the available studies, and (ii) to define their stylistic meaning.

Not every word mentioned in a study by another scholar, however, has been included in the following lists. The missing words are those regarded as non-central, peripheral or borderline types of reduplication. The following types are regarded as central:

(a) exocentric compounds, eg black-back 'black-backed gull',

- (b) compounds with a semantic shift in one of the elements, eg dry fly 'artificial fly' (the opposite is not a wet fly), in contrast to non-central night light, bed-stead,
- (c) compounds with transferred meaning, eg hot spot 'night club' (the original meaning being 'an area of the human body'),
- (d) compounds with grammatical irregularities, eg no-go,
- (e) compounds with full rhymes, eg brain drain, as opposed to non-central compounds with partial rhymes, eg hot rod, hitty missy, jiggery-pokery, whipper-snapper, handie-talkie,
- (f) compounds with regular syllable patterns, eg hip-hop, jeepers-creepers, as opposed to ricky-tick, clickety-click, hooey-balooley, chock-a-block, high and dry (for the last type, see KLÉGR 1991),
- (g) compounds which are not based on alliteration only, as opposed to blue blood, creepy-crawly, freeze frame, topsy-turvy.

Lists

Several lists of reduplicatives are to be used for the basic statistics, ie for the percentages of ablauts (A), rhymes (R) and pure reduplicatives (E for 'echo formations, or echoes'), and for the establishment of the main features of these three types. The central corpus is that based on the latest edition of the Shorter Oxford Dictionary (= SOD, SO). Although no page-by-page search has been made of the dictionary, it is hoped that nearly all cases of reduplications recorded there have been noticed. This kind of hope is based on the fact a list of more than two thousand words collected by scholars beginning with Pott has been checked in the SOD and also in the OED.

The five major lists to be presented here are the following:

List A: 2,418 reduplicatives collected by other scholars, with a few additions of my own.

List B: 1,283 „no-dictionary words“.

List C: 861 reduplicatives found in the OED.

List D: 591 reduplicatives found in the SOD.

List E: 215 slang expressions.

List A

This list should serve as a directory to other lists. It contains only the words, and further information about their sources, meaning etc can be found in List B or in the OED, SOD, and SLANG lists. List A includes a number of spelling variants, eg chimcham is listed as a separate entry, with reference to kimkam on the SOD list. On the SOD list, however, only kimkam is listed and chimcham is mentioned in the same entry as a variant. Two reasons may be offered for this arrangement: to make List A as much complete as possible, and to make the statistical data for the other lists as precise as possible. This arrangement means that the sum of items on lists B to E is lower than the number of items on List A (2,356 and 2,418, respectively).

In List B the number of spelling variants entered as separate entries has been reduced to cases where the ablaut or the rhyme differ from the basic form of the word. Thus feedle–faddle and coxy–roxy are listed separately from fiddle–faddle and coxy–loxy while plink–plonk and kyry–myry are listed under blink–blonk and kerry–merry. (In List A, the directory, plink–plonk and kyry–myry have their own entries, of course.) In the statistics, blink–blonk and plink–plonk are counted as one case of the /i–o/ ablaut, and kerry–merry and kyry–myry as one case of the /k–m-/ type of rhyme.

List B also includes spelling variants to entries in the SOD and the OED, eg holums–jolums is quoted by Kirchner as a variant of holus–bolus, which is in the SOD. The first form, which is not in the SOD, then figures in the statistics for List B, and the second form is an item in List D (SOD).

Homonyms are treated as independent entries, eg there are two entries for bim-bom: *bim-bom*¹ 'bells' THU and *bim-bom*² 'kind of jest' THU.

There are 1,283 entries in List B, out of which 807 (62.9 per cent) are rhymes, 318 (24.8 per cent) ablauts, and 158 (12.3 per cent) echo-formations. The proportions of these three types will be discussed later when the percentages for other lists are known. Two features of the lists are not surprising because they were described in previous studies: the majority of the /i — é/ pattern in the ablauts and the high number of the /h-/ type of rhymes. In List B the /i — é/ pattern is present in 57 per cent of the words and all the different patterns with the initial /i/ form 89 per cent of the ablaut list. Among the rhymes, 27.6 per cent of the words have /h-/ in the first part of the word, followed by /k-, spelled either c- or k-, and by /s-, t-, p-, r-, ranging from 8.8 to 6.8 per cent each. Inside the /h-/ group, the most frequent combination is /h- p-, followed by /h- b-, /h- t-, /h- d-, /h- g-, and /h- k-. Thus more than a half of this group is based on the combination 'h- plus a plosive'. Initial /s- is also frequent, mostly in consonant clusters.

List C

This is an auxiliary list because when the statistics for the OED are given later on, they will be based on the combination of this list and of the SOD list. Moreover, it is likely that there are still some reduplicative words in the OED not mentioned in any of the previous studies. No systematic search of the OED has been made.

List D

The following list is based on the SOD. The first version of the SOD list was checked first in the Collins English Dictionary (= CED) and then again in five American collegiate dictionaries (*Merriam Webster*¹⁰, *Webster's new world dictionary*³, Random House Webster's dictionary, The American heritage dictionary, Funk & Wagnall's standard college dictionary (= MW, WW, RH, AH, FW, respectively) and in five British learner's dictionaries (Cambridge international dictionary of English, Collins Cobuild English dictionary, Harraps's essential English dictionary, Longman dictionary of contemporary English, Oxford advanced learner's dictionary (= CI, CC, HE, LC, OA), respectively); the search of the smaller dictionaries proved useful because there were a few reduplicatives in the CED which were not found in SOD (eg boubou, buibui, coucou) and there were a few reduplicatives in the learner's dictionaries which were not found in the CED (eg hobo, Joe Blow, tsk-tsk, wakey-wakey).

The basic distribution of the three types of reduplicative words in List D is similar to that in List C: 22.5 per cent of ablauts, 39.9 per cent of rhymes, and 37.6 per cent of echo formations.

As our aim is some kind of stylistic hierarchy, several types of words were left out from the 591-word list. The reduction may be called stylistic and regional because it removed rare, obsolete and dialectal words, and words found in New Zealand, Australian and other Englishes with borrowings from local non-Indo-European languages. For the stylistic reduction the labels in SOD were the decisive ones and for the regional reduction the criterion was whether the word referred to purely local extra-linguistic reality (boubou 'a garment worn in Mali', kawakawa 'a NZ shrub', nene 'a goose native to Hawaii') or to something generally known (agar-agar, beriberi).

Table One

The sixty-nine most current reduplicatives

As Table One shows, the smallest number of reduplicative words was found in Harrap's essential dictionary, only 31 words: bandstand, bigwig, bye-bye 'goodbye', claptrap, criss-cross, downtown, fifty-fifty, ha-ha, hi-fi, hobnob, hobo, ho ho, hotchpotch/hodgepodge, humdrum, hush-hush, ill-will, knick-knack/knick-knacks, kowtow, now now, pawpaw 'a fruit', picnic, ping-pong, seesaw, singsong, titbit, tut-tut/tut, walkie-talkie, waylay, willy-nilly, yo-yo, zigzag. This number, however, is far from being typical of the selected dictionaries and therefore the Cambridge international dictionary was used to create a list of the most frequent reduplicatives. The list from the CIDE was then checked against all the remaining dictionaries and if a word was mentioned in all but one of the learner's and college dictionaries, it was left on the list. The result are the following sixty-nine words:

back-track, boo-boo, bow-wow, bye-bye, can-can, cha-cha, chit-chat, crisscross, dilly-dally, ding-dong, dum-dum, fifty-fifty, flip-flop, fuddy-duddy, ga-ga, goody-goody, ha-ha, hanky-panky, heebie-jeebies, hee-haw, helter-skelter, hi-fi, higgledy-piggledy, hobo, hocus-pocus, hoity-toity, hotchpotch, hubbub, humdrum, hurdy-gurdy, hurly-burly, knick-knack, kowtow, mamma, mishmash, mumbo-jumbo, namby-pamby, nitty-gritty, nitwit, paw-paw, pell-mell, picnic, ping-pong, pitter-patter, pom-pom, pooh-pooh, powwow, razzle-dazzle, riffraff, roly-poly, seesaw, shilly-shally, sing-song, squeegee, teepee, tiptop, titbit, tittle-tattle, tom-tom, tsetse, tutu, voodoo, walkie-talkie, waylay, wheeler-dealer, willy-nilly, wishy-washy, yo-yo, zig-zag.

As Table One shows, List E, not very representative of contemporary slang, differs from all the other lists and dictionaries in the distribution of types of reduplicative words. Ablauts are very rare and the number of echoes is the second lowest in the table.

History

The following table shows the centuries when the reduplicative words were first recorded. (0 means no date.)

CENTURIES

	ABLAUTS		RHYMES		ECHOES

Table Two

The ablauts were very strong in the 16th century but then the number of new formations gradually decreased while the number of the rhymes and the echoes was on the increase, with the last two centuries being markedly stronger than the previous centuries. The rising number of echoes is partly linked with the borrowings from non-European languages and partly with their colloquial character (they do not appear in written texts).

The proportion of new ablauts, rhymes and echoes in each century is shown in the following table, eg in the 17c., 46 new reduplicatives were recorded: 20 ablauts, 23 rhymes and 3 echoes, ie 43.5, 50.0 and 6.5 per cent respectively.

Meaning

According to Bloomfield and Newmark, reduplicated 'words sometimes suggest intimacy and affection and partially make up for our lack of diminutives' (1963.347). Peprník (1992) says that movement and sound are main meanings of echoes, typical of baby talk, and of ablauts while rhymes suggest intensification and negative emotional colouring. Quirk at al. (1985) also mention sounds and movement, instability, nonsense, insincerity, intensification. In the table below intensification, nonsense etc are included in the category of quality, eg bigwig 'important person', demi-semi 'quarter', often derog., hotchpotch 'mixture', blahblah 'meaningless talk', chichi 'fussy, stylish'. Among the echoes, a strong group of nursery terms has been included under 'quality', eg choo-choo, chuff-chuff, chug-chug, din-din, gee-gee. About half the rhymes are regarded as descriptions, eg arty-crafty 'characteristic of the arts and crafts movement', black-back 'black-backed gull', brain drain, downtown, hurdy-gurdy, walkie-talkie, beriberi, dumdum, never-never, tse-tse, yo-yo, Lib-Lab, seesaw.

	ABLAUTS	RHYMES	ECHOES
Quality	36.6%	40.1%	36.1%
Sound	24.0%	6.0%	28.7%
Movement	17.3%	0.6%	3.7%
Description	19.2%	49.7%	31.5%
Shape	2.9%	3.6%	—

Table Four

Reduplicatives expressing quality:

airy-fairy, argy-bargy, art-farty, bibble-babble, bigwig, blahblah, charivari, chit-chat. chitter-chatter, chop-chop, clap-trap, culture vulture, fal-lal, fiddle-faddle, fie-fie, flim-flam, flubdub, funny money, gibble-gabble, girly-girly, go-go, goody-goody, hanky-panky, helter-skelter, hi-hi, hirdy-girly, hoity-toity, hoo-ha, hootchy-kootchy, hot spot, hotshot, hotsy-totsy, hugger-mugger, humdrum, hurly-burly, hush-hush, ill will, jibber-jabber, kittle cattle, lardy-dardy, miminy-piminy. mingle-mangle, mish-mash, mixty-maxty, mumbo-jumbo, namby-pamby, niddle-noddle. niddy-noddy, niffy-naffy, nitwit, pell-mell, raggle-taggle, ragtag, ree-raw, riff-raff, roly-poly. rough stuff, rough-scruff, rumpy-pumpy, scribble-scrabble, shag-bag, shilly-shally, silly billy, sing-song, slambam, slangwhang, slip-slop, softly-softly, super-duper, talkee-talkee, tee-hee, teeny-tiny, ticky-tacky, tiptop, tittle-tattle, tootsy-wootsy, tow-row, trinkum-trankum, twenty-twenty, twiddle-twaddle, uh-uh, wheeler-dealer, whimsy-whamsy, willy-nilly, wishy-washy, yaw-taw

Reduplicatives expressing description:

ack-ack, agar-agar, arty-crafty, baba, back-track, bandstand, beriberi, black-back. black-jack. bon-bon, boogie-woogie, brain drain, bye-bye, can-can, cha-cha, chalk talk, chiffchaff, chin-chin, chow-chow, cook book, dead-head, des res, dim sim, din-din, downtown, dryfly, dum-dum, fa-la, fan-tan, fifty-fifty, frou-frou, ga-ga, gewgaw, giff-gaff, gobo, goo-goo, gully-gully, handy-dandy, hi-spy, hobnob, Hobson-Jobson, hocus-pocus, Hogen Mogen, hokey-cokey, hoo-poe, hotpot, housey-housey, hubba-hubba, huff-duff, hully gully, humpty dumpty. jo-jo. Kit-cat, kiwi, Li-Lo, locofoco, nay-say, near-beer, never-never, nitty-gritty, non-con, pack-sack, pall-mall, pay-day, pee-pee, peetweet, picnic, pisha paysha, potshot, powwow, red lead, redhead, ree-raw, riacrac, ro-ro, rug bug, rum-tum, seesaw, seesee, so-ho, stock-lock, swing wing, swish-swash, tag-rag, bamboo-bamboo, teeter-totter, tol-lol, toy boy, tric-trac, tutti-frutti, tutu, tuzzy-muzzy, voodoo, wakey-wakey, walkie-talkie, waylay, wirr-warr, yo-ho, yo-yo, zoot suit

Form

The form of the reduplicatives is to be analyzed from two points of view: the number of syllables and the way they were formed.

The monosyllables prevail among the echoes and form about two thirds of the ablauts but in the rhymes they are in balance with the dissyllables.

	ABLAUTS	RHYMES	ECHOES
MONOSYLLABIC	65 = 62.5%	98 = 58.7%	90 = 83.4%
DISSYLLABIC with syllabic consonant	15 = 14.4%	4 = 2.4%	1 = 0.9%
DISSYLLABIC	22 = 21.2%	61 = 36.5%	16 = 14.8%
TRISYLLABIC	2 = 1.9%	4 = 2.4%	1 = 0.9%
TOTAL	104 = 100.0%	167 = 100.0%	108 = 100.0%

Table Five

About sixty per cent of the ablauts and about ten per cent of the rhymes were formed by repetition of the original word, either with an ablaut change or with a change in the initial consonant. The direction of this change is described as forward or backward, eg the word bibble-babble was formed from babble, which we call a forward direction, and the word click-clack from click, which is backward direction in our description. Although the forward types are twice as numerous as the backward ones among the ablauts, the final result, ie the ablaut pair, seems to be more important than the direction of the change.

	ABLAUTS	RHYMES
forward	42 – 40.4%	4 – 2.4%
backward	20 – 19.2%	17 – 10.2%
compounds	20 – 19.2%	82 – 49.0%
imitative	14 – 13.5%	22 – 13.2%
not clear	8 – 7.7%	19 – 11.4%
foreign origin	—	23 – 13.8%
	104 – 100.0%	167 – 100.0%

Table Six

Stress patterns

The analysis of stress patterns is based on fourteen dictionaries: the SOD, the CED, the five British learner's dictionaries and the five American college dictionaries, Wells's Longman pronunciation dictionary and Jones's *English pronouncing dictionary*¹⁵. In cases where these dictionaries failed, another three dictionaries were searched: the OED, the Third Webster (W3) and Webster's new universal unabridged dictionary (WU).

The main aim of the analysis was to establish the percentages of reduplicative words with the main stress on the first component and on the second component. No clear-cut boundaries could be established (i) because the number of dictionaries where the pronunciation of a reduplicative is given varies from one to twelve, (ii) the American dictionaries, and the CED, very often indicate level stress, which is not used in Jones and Wells. A reduplicate may then be classified as bearing level stress because it occurs in American dictionaries only. Moreover, about ten per cent of the entries have not been included in the statistics because no dictionary gives the pronunciation.

For lack of space only specimens of the lists can be printed here:

Table Seven

Summary

1. The data in Table One show that more than half of all the reduplicatives are on List B, the non-dictionary list. They are non-lexicalized formations with limited occurrence. Their number confirms the strong position of reduplication in colloquial English. The low percentage of echoes, nearly the same as in the slang list, may be explained by the absence of words of foreign origin and of expressions from baby-talk, many cases of which have been recorded in dictionaries. The no-dictionary list and the slang list also share the strongest presence of rhymes.
2. The lowest percentage of ablauts is to be found among the SOD-rare reduplicatives, ie reduplicatives left out from the SOD list because they are rare, obsolete, etc. The SOD-rare list is dominated by the echoes, usually taken over from non-Indo-European languages in this case.
3. The ablauts, although on a relative decrease (see Tables Two and Three), have a more or stable absolute position. This position may be supported by their meanings, ie by a clear majority of specialized meanings (quality, sound, movement), in contrast with the high percentage of pure description in the rhymes and the echoes.
4. The denotative meanings of the reduplicative words in the SOD list, summarized in Table Four, are not limited to shape, movement, sound etc., traditionally ascribed to them, but they include nearly 50 per cent of pure description in the rhymes and the echoes. The form of the reduplicatives, however, adds a stylistic meaning, the reduplicatives are marked.
5. The stress patterns, as recorded in dictionaries, show three distinct tendencies in the SOD list: (i) nearly all ablauts are stressed on the first element, which only confirms that the direction of formation (Table Six) is not that important, (ii) three fourths of the echoes have the stress on the first syllable, (iii) stress on the second elements is strong in the rhymes only. The rhyme also have the highest percentage of dissyllables (Table Five).
