

contributors | collaborateurs

MÁTYÁS BÁNHEGYI is a full-time adjunct professor at the English Linguistics Department of Károli Gáspár University of the Reformed Church in Hungary in Budapest. He offers language practice, methodology and Translation Studies courses and also deals with translation and culture-related aspects of Canada. He is the co-author of Teach Canada! 2.0 Resource CD for Secondary School Teachers of EFL, Canadian-German-Hungarian Cultural Reader and A Cultural Reader on Aboriginal Perspectives in Canada.

JASON BLAKE works in the English Department at the University of Ljubljana, Slovenia. In 2010 he published Canadian Hockey Literature with the University of Toronto Press. He has translated widely from Slovenian, and is the author of Culture Smart! Slovenia, a guide to navigating the cultural mores of that country. His other recent publication is Writing Short Literature Essays: A Textbook with Exercises for Slovenian Students, which focuses on cross-cultural confusion in writing traditions.

MONICA BOTTEZ is Professor of English at the University of Bucharest, Romania, Director of the Canadian Studies Centre of UB and director of the Canadian Studies module of the Intercultural Communication Strategies MA programme. She teaches courses on English Canadian Literature, Multiculturalism, Imagology and Narratology. She has lectured on Canadian topics in Germany (2001). Her recent publications include two books (Analysing Narrative Fiction: Reading Strategies, E.U.B., 2007; Infinite Horizons: Canadian Fiction in English, E.U.B., 2010) and articles on various Canadian authors (Ray Smith, Kenneth Radu, Ronald Lee, Joy Kogawa, Rudy Wiebe, Frances Brooke, Howard O'Hagan, Sheila Watson, Margaret Laurence, Alice Munro, Sheldon Rosen). She has also translated Margaret Atwood's The Handmaid's Tale into Romanian (1995).

MAGDALENA FIŘTOVÁ is an Assistant Professor of International Studies at Charles University in Prague, the Czech Republic, where she teaches History of Canada, Government of Canada and Economic Issues in North America. She earned an MA degree in International Relations from the University of Economics, Prague (2001) and a PhD degree in International Territorial Studies from Charles University (2007).

MÁRIA HUTTOVÁ is a Senior Lecturer and head of the Department of British and American Studies of Comenius University in Bratislava, Slovakia, where she is also Director of the Canadian Studies Centre. She is a co-founder of CEACS. She specializes in the Canadian modern novel and has published several articles on Margaret Atwood and Michael Ondaatje. Her other professional interests include Canadian drama and British literature.

MILENA KOSTIĆ is a teaching assistant at the English Department of the Faculty of Philosophy in Niš, Serbia. She defended her MA thesis – The Faustian Motif in the Tragedies of Christopher Marlowe – in March 2009, and is currently working on her Ph.D. thesis. Her interests comprise a variety of academic fields, including Canadian Studies, British Studies and Medieval and Renaissance English Literature.

VESNA LOPIČIĆ is a Full Professor at the Faculty of Philosophy of the University of Niš, Serbia. She has published the study Fall into Culture: Human Nature in the Work of William Golding and Margaret Atwood (2002), two collections of essays on Canadian literature and a number of course books and readers. She co-edited (with B. Mišićlić) two collections of essays, namely Identity Issues: Literary and Linguistic Landscapes (2010) and Challenging Change: Literary and Linguistic Responses (2012), published by Cambridge Scholars Publishing. She teaches English Literature and British and Canadian Studies courses and her special interest is the Serbian Diaspora in Canada and the novel in English.

JUDIT MOLNÁR teaches in the North American Department, University of Debrecen, Hungary, where she is also Director of the Canadian Studies Centre. She introduced Canadian Studies at the University of Debrecen. She teaches courses on Canadian literature and culture. She has published a large number of articles on Canadian literature and edited a book with contributions by internationally acknowledged authors from both sides of the Atlantic that examines Canada through multidisciplinary approaches. Her main fields of interest are multicultural literatures in Canada and English-language writing in Québec.

JUDIT NAGY is a full-time adjunct professor at the Department of English Linguistics of the Károli Gáspár University of the Hungarian Reformed Church in Budapest, where she has been teaching courses in Canadian Studies and applied linguistics. She defended her PhD dissertation, entitled But a Few Acres of Snow? – Weather Images in Canadian Short Prose (1945-2000) at Eötvös Loránd University in early 2009. Her current fields of research include metaphors in an interdisciplinary approach as well as curriculum and teaching material development in Canadian Studies and in applied linguistics.

MARIJA PAPRAŠAROVSKI enseigne dans le Département de Français de l'Université de Zagreb, Croatie. Active depuis de nombreuses années dans l'Association d'Études Canadiennes en Europe Centrale, elle a publié et présenté beaucoup sur la littérature canadienne, en particulier sur le théâtre. En outre, elle est très active comme traductrice de la littérature.

TOMÁŠ POSPÍŠIL is Associate Professor in the Department of English and American Studies, Faculty of Arts, Masaryk University in Brno, Czech Republic. He teaches American literature, American and Canadian film and American cultural studies. He was an ACLS Visiting Scholar at the University of California, Santa Cruz, in 1993/94 and Fulbright Fellow at the University of Southern California in 1999. More recently he has been visiting Canadian universities (University of Toronto, University of British Columbia) on a variety of short-term fellowships. His current research interests involve African-American film representation and Canadian films.

WERONIKA SUCHACKA is employed at the English Department of Szczecin University, Poland. She received her PhD from the University of Greifswald in 2011, graduating summa cum laude for a dissertation on the constructions of identity in Ukrainian-Canadian literature. In addition to her focus on Ukrainian-Canadian writing, she is has published, presented on, or is interested in, literary border-crossing, postmodern theories of identities as well as gender studies.

ASYA SOTIROVA is a graduate student at the New Bulgarian University (NBU) in Sofia, Bulgaria. In 2009 she successfully completed the Bachelor's programme in American and British Studies and enrolled in the Master's programme in American and British Cultural Studies. Her interest in Canadian Studies awakened after attending a course in the Cultural History of Canada. After becoming more familiar with Canadian art, traditions and culture, she now feels inspired to write and learn about the country's history and development. As a writer and artist her personal interests are connected with the exploration of Canada's ethnicity and the traditions of the Indigenous people.

LILIANA VOICULESCU travaille comme enseignant chercheur à la Faculté des Lettres (Université de Pitești – Roumanie) dans le cadre du Département Langue et Littérature (Chaire de Français). Elle y enseigne des cours de littérature canadienne francophone et de communication interculturelle. Elle a publié de nombreux articles qui abordent de manière interdisciplinaire les littératures québécoise et française. Sa thèse – La Représentation des identités sociales dans le roman canadien contemporain. L'exemple de Jacques Poulin – a été récemment publiée chez ANRT (France). Elle a aussi collaboré au Dictionnaire de francophonie canadienne paru en 2011 aux Presses de l'Université « Alexandru Ioan Cuza » d'Iași (Roumanie) sous la direction de Corina Panaitescu.

